Appendix 1: Management of Election of Office-Bearers and Committee Members

Introduction

Members shall be given at least 21 days notice of the intention to hold the Society's Annual General Meeting. That notice may be given electronically, by the serving of notice by mail, or by a notice in the Society's Newsletter.

At that time nominations shall be called for the positions of the Society's officer-bearers and ordinary Committee members. The nominee must be a financial member of the Society, and the nomination must be made by a financial member of the Society and the seconder must be a financial member of the Society. The nominee must indicate acceptance of the nomination, agree to the responsibilities of the position, and may provide a short statement about themselves for the benefit of members. That statement will be included with the completed nomination form.

A member may only nominate or second one person.

The prescribed nomination forms are available at the Society's premises.

The completed nomination form must be lodged with the Returning Officer, or in a place specified by the Returning Officer, by close of business 15 days prior to the date of the Annual General Meeting.

Administration

The Secretary or other person as determined by the Committee shall prepare ballot papers in a form that divides the election of office-bearers from that of ordinary Committee members.

The ballot papers shall include for all positions:

- Nominee's name
- Nominator's name
- Secunder's name
- The short statement supplied by the nominee as to their relevant experience

In the case where the number of nominations for a role is equal to or less than the number of positions available for that role ballot papers will not include that role.

In the case where the number of nominations for all roles is equal to or less than the number of positions available for the roles ballot papers will not be prepared.

In both the above cases the membership present at the Annual General Meeting will still be required to approve the nominations. If the nomination is not approved then the position is vacant.

Casting of Votes

At the Annual General Meeting, under the control of the Returning Officer, financial members of the Society shall be given two ballot papers:

- one containing the nominations for office-bearers and,
- one containing nominations for Committee Members.

If, in either category the number of nominations equals, or is less than, the available number of positions, that ballot paper is not distributed.

If, the number of nominations in either category exceeds the available places a ballot shall be held for that category, commencing with office-bearers.

Following the declaration of that poll, voting shall then proceed to the election of ordinary Committee members, allowing for the removal of any candidates who become an office-bearer.

If that removal provides a number of candidates equal, or less than, the number of vacancies, no ballot shall occur, but the Annual General Meeting will still be required to accept those people who were nominated before they can be declared as elected.

If that removal of candidates for ordinary member due to them being elected as an office-bearer provides a number of candidates less than required to form a Committee, the elected Committee shall fill those as casual vacancies.

Prior to the ballots, a candidate may remove his/her name from the list of nominations.

Appendix 2: Explanatory Notes

Meeting Types

There are several types of meetings. Most are general meetings and some are extraordinary meetings. Additionally, there are Annual General Meetings and Special General Meetings.

General Meeting

These meetings are ordinary or regular meetings. They are meetings which are usually held on a regular basis and conduct business for which no special notice needs to be given (according to the organisation's rules or constitution).

Extraordinary Meeting

An extraordinary meeting is simply a meeting that is outside the regular timetable. It is usually called to discuss something important or unusual. This type of meeting requires no special notice but it is good governance to advise eligible members that the meeting is being held, and the purpose for it being held outside of the normal timetable – that is, the topic of discussion.

Annual General Meeting

This is the meeting which most organisations have once each year and the requirements are usually found in the constitution, and also often in the legislation under which the organisation is constituted.

An Annual General Meeting (usually referred to as an AGM) will often have the reports of the major office-bearers, consideration of the annual financial report, election of officers, adopting the budget for the next 12 months (which should include the membership fee if there is one) and also changes to the constitution.

AGMs have special requirements in terms of the period of time for which notice of the meeting has to be given and often also, the nature of information that must be provided in advance – financial reports for instance.

The word “general” in Annual General Meeting means that anybody who is a financial member of the organisation is entitled to attend and vote in most cases.

Special General Meeting

A Special General Meeting (SGM) has exactly the same powers and voting requirements as an AGM and must meet all the same requirements such as a minimum period for notice of meeting.

Special General Meetings must have a specific purpose. The most common is to consider changes to the constitution.

Special Resolutions

Extract of Section 39 from the Associations Incorporation Act 2009 No 7:

- (1) A resolution is passed by an association as a special resolution :
- (a) at a meeting of the association of which notice has been given to its members no later than 21 days before the date on which the meeting is held, or
 - (b) in a postal or electronic ballot conducted by the association, or

- (c) in such other manner as the Secretary may direct,
if it is supported by at least three-quarters of the votes cast by members of the association who, under the associations constitution, are entitled to vote on the proposed resolution.
- (2) A notice referred to in subsection (1) (a) must include the terms of the resolution and a statement to the effect that the resolution is intended to be passed as a special resolution.
 - (3) A postal ballot referred to in subsection (1) (b) may only be conducted in relation to resolutions of a kind that the association's constitution permits to be voted on by means of a postal ballot and, if conducted, must be conducted in accordance with the regulations.
 - (4) A direction under subsection (1) (c) may not be given unless the Secretary¹ is satisfied that, in the circumstances, it is impracticable to require votes to be cast in the manner provided by subsection (1) (a) or (b)."
